MUSIC NOTES

The Pieta Girls Orphanage in Venice (one of four maintained by the State) had a population of between 400 and 500 in 1663, rising to 1000 in 1738. The girls were divided into two groups - commoners, who received a general education, and those who received a specifically musical education. How many were in the latter group is not known, but they were widely praised for their musical abilities, both vocal and instrumental.

Antonio Vivaldi (1675 - 1741) was appointed teacher of the violin in 1704, shortly after he had been ordained. This was the start of an often stormy relationship with the Governors of the Pieta.

It has been suggested by Michael Talbot, in his book on Vivaldi, that all the parts in the Gloria were originally sung by the girls, the tenor part at the notated pitch and the bass part one octave higher, the harmony being completed by the bass continuo. Despite this interesting speculation, the Choir will today sing the work in the normal four-part version.

EXSULTATE, JUBILATE

MOZART (1756 - 1791)

1. Exsultate, jubilate
(Exalt, Rejoice)
2. Fulget amica dies
(The day brightens pleasantly)
3. Tu virginum corona
(Thou crown of maidens)
4. Alleluia

This work, in which man is urged to strike up sweet songs and beg the Virgin for peace, was written for Vananzio Rouzzini, who was in Milan for Mozart's opera Lucio Silla. "He sang like an angel" said Mozart. Accordingly, Mozart rewarded him with a work specially written to display his particular talents. The work was first performed in 1773 and has often been described as a vocal concerto.

OUR SOLOISTS

Helena Leonard Soprano

Helena Leonard was born and educated in Cheshire where she began her singing career as a mezzo-soprano. In 1983 she entered Trinity College of Music, London to study voice with Elizabeth Hawes and gained her licentiate (LTCL). She made her London debut at St. James Church, Piccadilly singing the part of Mary in Berlioz's L'Enfance du Christ.

Helena then went on to a postgraduate vocal course at the Guildhall School of Music with Johanna Peters. At this time her voice was changing to soprano. She joined the English National Opera as a soprano, was in the chorus from 1988 to 1995, and had her first solo role in a production of Rigoletto in 1992.

In April 1993 Helena took part in the Evelyn Glennie competition for percussion with a special composition by Marjorie Anstey for percussion and two voices. They were awarded first prize.

Andrea Gray Mezzo-Soprano

Andrea was born in Birmingham in 1965. She left there when she gained a place to study singing at the Royal College of Music. Since leaving college in 1988 she has sung professionally as a soloist with various choral societies.

She has sung in numerous professional groups, including the Academy of Ancient Music, Ambrosian Opera Chorus and the Finzi singers.
